Dear Friend:

A year and a half has passed since the Pacem in Terris II Conference. During that time, strife in the world has continued unabated. There are hopeful signs, however, that the aims and efforts of Pacem in Terris to generate dialogue between people of stature and good-will in the nations of the world are producing these dialogues and generating a rising level of pressure against conflict.

I am happy to be able to send this book to you at a time in the year when many people in the world are thinking hard about peace on earth and good-will to men.

With warm personal regards,

Sincerely,

James Roosevelt

enclosure.
